A.H. Fox Guns in Production Again

The Connecticut Shotgun Manufacturing Company of New Britain, Connecticut, announced it is currently manufacturing the higher grades of the original A.H. Fox 20-gauge double-barrel shotgun. Once again, these classic double guns are available to American sportsmen with the same superior handling qualities and reliability as the pre-World War II guns. The balance, weight and simplicity of design of the newly manufactured A.H. Fox guns are unsurpassed. A.H. Fox guns are manufactured in the United States. Receivers are scalloped and rebated and tastefully case-colored in the traditional manner. The finishing on A.H. Fox guns is done by hand. Polishing, rust bluing, engraving, stock checkering and fitting are all done manually by master craftsmen trained in the fine art of gunmaking. The entry-level CE Grade is engraved with beautiful scroll and game scenes, stocked with Turkish Circassian walnut and priced at $5,650. Standard higher-grade guns range from $8,500 to $17,500, with the Exhibition Grade at $25,000. For more information, contact Connecticut Shotgun Manufacturing Co., A.H. Fox Shotguns, P.O.
